To Gladiolus Lovers:

Of all the summer flowering plants, few, if any, have made more rapid progress in popular favor than the Gladiolus.

On account of its good keeping qualities the Gladiolus surpasses all other flowers for cutting purposes, and in order to obtain the utmost pleasure from the blooms you should cut the spikes as soon as the first flower opens on the stalk and place them in vases in the house. A vase of blooms may be kept fresh for a week or more. Not only that but the colors will be brighter and more beautiful when cut than when out in the sunny garden. The Gladiolus is particularly adapted to table decoration. Cut the spike in the morning or evening when the first bloom opens. Change the water daily, remove the withered portions, and cut (on a slant) an inch or so off end of each stem. Every bud will open one by one to the very top.

Culture

The culture of the Gladiolus is so simple as to render it the most satisfactory of garden flowers, thriving and blooming freely with the least care and attention and making a display which for beauty of bloom and brilliancy of coloring is unequalled by any other flower. Do not plant in shade of trees or buildings, and do not allow fresh manure to come in direct contact with bulbs. Use well-rotted manure, commercial fertilizer, wood ashes, or bone meal, well mixed with the soil. Set the bulbs four to five inches deep in rows and about three to four inches between each bulb. Keep soil loose and free from weeds.

When cutting flower spike let three to four leaves remain on the plant to allow the bulb to mature properly. Dig the bulbs any time after October 1st; cut off tops, and after drying in the open air for a few days store away in a dry, cool, but frost-proof place in the cellar. Keep as near 40 degrees as possible.

THE GLADIOLUS BULLETIN, published by Stanley Thorpe, is full of chatty and helpful items of interest to lovers of this wonderful flower. Subscription, 25 cents a year. Send name and address to Stanley Thorpe, Medway, R. D., Mass.
General Culture of GLADIOLI

The culture of Gladioli is extremely simple and easy, as they will grow on any good soil. Like many other plants, they resent coming into direct contact with fresh manure. They require only ordinary rainfall for water, and only an ordinary amount of cultivating to keep them thrifty and vigorous. Advise planting in this latitude about May 15, planting corms about 5 inches deep. For fertilizer we recommend sheep manure, bone meal or well-rotted stable manure. Keep the ground mellow by cultivating during the summer.

When blooms appear, should they be too light a green, sprinkle the ground with Portland cement, soot or wood ashes; this will have a tendency to darken the foliage and also accentuate and darken the colors of the flowers. To produce large flowers, use dried blood or liquid manure, being careful not to over-fertilize, as too much fertilizer will result in weakening the corms for the following season.

We prefer cutting the spikes and taking them in the house to open up in a vase. The colors are usually better handled in this way than if left to bloom on the stalk. In cutting, do not remove all of the foliage. Make it a rule to always leave as many leaves as possible to nourish corm the rest of season. If you leave the spike without cutting it, the corm will become exhausted by the flowering and seed-forming process. Do not plant too often in the same place. Try to alternate each year.

Harvesting of Bulbs

At beginning of winter, say during the latter part of October, dig the corms and cut the tops off about a half-inch above the corm. After drying thoroughly three or four weeks, the old husks can be removed. This can be done at one's convenience during the winter. Place them in a cool frost-proof cellar for winter. Do not let the corms freeze. If the cellar is too warm, they will grow too early in the spring. Ideal conditions are at a temperature of between 40 and 50 degrees throughout the winter. Do not pile the corms up too deeply: about three inches is deep enough. We prefer having them in open boxes or trays rather than paper bags. The latter are inclined to produce mold.
